FOND OF HUNTING.

A Queer Specimen of Humanity Encountered in North Carolina.
Wid Madford was an old hunter of North Carolina, who had many stories to tell, and a lingo of his own in which to tell them. The author of "The Heart of the Alleghenies" asked him whether a black bear would ever attack a man. "He 'pends on circumstances," was the answer. "He wouldn't tech the fellest human 'less he was cornered an' hed to fight his way out, or he war wounded, or hit war an ole who with cubs. In sich cases look out, I say."

"I memorize one time thet I war in a tight box. He war down on Figger, whar the laurel is too thick for a covvy o' partridge ter rise from."

"Thar war one straight trail an' I war in it. My gun war empty. I heered the dogs a-comin' an' knowed without axin' thet the bar war afore 'em."

"I never hed no objections to meetin' a varmint in a squar', stan' up fight—like a man agin' my knife, ye know; so without wastin' thinkin' on gittin' outer the way, I retched for my sticker. The tassel thing war gone, an' thar war me without a weapon big enough to skin a beaver."

"I rud along, lookin' at the laurel on both sides, but thar warnt a place in it for a man to git one leg in. Ticklish! Ye're sound thar. I didn't know what to do, an' I got all in a sweat, an' drawin' nigher, aligher, up the windin' trail I heered the varmint comin'."

"Wal, I drapped on my elbows an' knees squar across the narer path, so narer thet I hed ter hump myself up. I kinder squinted out one side, to see the percession, ye know."

"He war a big, monster brute, with a loose tongue hangin' out, an' red eyes. He war trottin' like a stage-hoss."

"He never stopped, even to sniff me, but puttin' his paw on my back, as though I war a log, he jest leapt over me, an' war out of sight in a jork. The dogs war close on his heels, a-snapin' away, an' every one on 'em jumped over me as keersless like as him, an' raced along without ever stoppin' ter lok their master's han'."

"Do you like hunting?" I asked as he finished.

"Good law!"

Thar was his sole answer, but with the astounded look on his face it expressed every thing.

"Wid, your life has been one long, rough experience. If you had to live over agin, knowin' as much as you do now, how would you live?"

As though the question were one he had thought over agin and agin, without hesitating a moment, he laid his hand on my shoulder and said:

"I'd git me a neet woman, and go to the wildest kentry in creation, an' hunt from the day I war big nuff to tote a rifle-gun until ole age an' roomatics laid me up."

TRICKS OF BEGGARS.
If some of the people who make a living by begging would turn their wits into other channels they would, perhaps, soon become prosperous, says the Chicago Journal. The skillful and successful beggar seems to be a man of not a few ideas, for the warm competition in his business compels him to keep up with the times. He is constantly casting about for some new scheme which he may put into operation in order to work upon the generosity of men. There is something peculiarly insolent and reckless about most professional beggars. They seem to think that a man will respond to a call for aid if they show inequality in their manner of approaching him. Many of them after taking a man's money do not hesitate to show a certain air of contempt for him, while not infrequently they pour forth a torrent of abuse if they are repulsed.

If you stop one of the wretches, after giving him ten cents, and ask him if his story is true, it is like that he will tell you that he lied to you. He seems to take pleasure in letting you know that he is shrewd enough to deceive people.

One of the most recent schemes noticed by the writer is that of a rather decent-looking fellow who goes up to a man and tells him with apparent frankness, that he has just been released from prison after serving a sentence for forgery. If he can hold his victim's attention long enough he explains the circumstances of his crime, conviction and punishment. These stories vary greatly. No doubt the fellow fashions them to fit the case in hand. There is, he will say, such a prejudice against a forger that he finds it impossible to get any thing to do, although he is an experienced accountant or a good book-keeper. While the man thus approached may be unwilling himself to trust a convicted forger, he feels some responsibility in flatly refusing to assist a man who declares that he is struggling to creep from drifting back into his old habits in spite of the strong current of distrustful public opinion. Although by no means convinced of the truth of the man's story, he feels inclined to run the risk of being imposed upon, and often ends by giving him a quarter.

One Pair of Gloves for Two.
General Charles E. Hooker, a member of Congress from the Seventh Mississippi district, was one of the heroes of the late war against the Union. He carries an empty sleeve as a relic of his experiences on the field. Major Powell, the Chief of the Geological Survey, was in the Union army, and he also carries an empty sleeve. General Hooker's lost arm was on his right side and Major Powell's on the left. Their remaining hands are of the same proportions, and they have a mutual agreement under which they purchase gloves in common. Major Powell using all of the "rights" and General Hooker the "lefts." No difficulty ever occurs between them about the selection of these gloves, for they pay little attention to the perennial changes in modes and fashions.

Good Noses Are Scarce.
Of all the features of the human face the nasal organ, being the most prominent, stands supreme as a revealer of character. Its form gives the greatest expression and individuality to the facial lineaments, and even the voice is affected and toned by this important member. The individual whose nature has been blessed with a really well-formed and perfect nose should indeed be grateful, as on an average barely two per cent. of the ordinary population can claim to possess a perfectly shaped nasal organ.

He Heard the Post Laureate.
Dr. Buckley tells a story in the Christian Advocate about his following Tennyson years ago through the South Kensington museum, hoping to hear him speak. For two mortal hours and a half he did this without success. "At last he made signs as if he was about to do so. Hoping to hear some criticism of a painting we listened intently, and these memorable words fell from the lips of England's poet laureate: 'You take care of the children while I go and get some beer.'"

The Cronin Trial.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—At the opening of the Cronin trial this morning, the State's Attorney secured an attachment for Edward Spellman of Peoria, Ill., District officer of the Clan-na-Gael. The first witness, Dennis O'Connor, testified as to the proceedings of Camp 21 on the night of February 8th. His memory was deficient.

Patrick Nolan, a financier and secretary of Camp 21, testified that the meeting of the Camp the night before Cronin was murdered was called for a report of the secret committee appointed on February 8th, and Beggs, Senior Guardian, said the committee was to report to him personally.

The next witness was Captain F. O'Connor, the man who created the excitement in Camp 21 on the night of Feb. 8th by saying that he had heard read in another Camp a report of the committee that tried the triangle. Captain O'Connor said Andrew Fogie made a speech, saying the disclosures by Le Caron showed there were four British spies in the Clan-na-Gael, and it was necessary to re-organize in order to get them out. O'Connor then said the re-organization was run by a parcel of rogues as an executive body, who had squandered a hundred thousand dollars of the organization's funds and sent its best men to English prisons; that Le Caron was an agent of the executive body and was paid by them. O'Connor then told of hearing in another camp the report of the committee to try the triangle, and had seen a written report of 300 closely written pages. Then Dan Coughlin moved the appointment of a secret committee to find the source of O'Connor's information, and Senior Guardian Beggs said he would appoint the committee.

Pronounced Untrue.
By Associated Press.
BOSTON, Oct. 30.—The story that the Union Pacific has purchased the Chicago & Alton road is pronounced untrue at the Union Pacific office.

New York, Oct. 30.—Notwithstanding all denials, the Wall Street news agency says: The Vanderbilt interests insist that the control of the Alton has been bought, and it is stated that a Union Pacific collateral trust bond will be used to take up all the stock now being printed.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—"The statement that the Chicago & Alton had been absorbed by the Union Pacific is a lie made out of whole cloth," said Vice-President McMullen.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE.

To Be Held During Thanksgiving Week.
State Superintendent W. C. Dovey is in town visiting the school teachers and Trustees in the interest of the Teachers Institute to be held during Thanksgiving week in Virginia. The Institute will begin on Tuesday and end on Saturday of that week. A very large attendance is expected. The exercises will be conducted by Nevada talent, and every effort is being made to make the occasion pleasant and profitable. Accommodations for visiting delegations of ladies will be provided.

Trustees are requested to give a vacation for that week, allowing salaries to go on to all teachers who attend the Institute. This is the law in Arizona and nearly all the States of the Union. Questions of first importance to the educational interests of the State will be discussed.

As the last three State Institutes were held in Reno and one held in Virginia for more than twelve years, it is hoped that Washoe county teachers will attend in full force. Ormsby, Douglas and Lyon counties will lend their assistance in large numbers.

It is two years since an institute was held and it is believed that the most successful ever held in the State. Reduced fares on both the U. P. and V. & T. roads.

A FORCIBLE SPEAKER.

Who Attacks All the Practical Vices of the Day.
Referring to a recent speech made by Major Hilton, who is to talk in Reno next Sunday, a correspondent of the Binghamton, N. Y. Republican wrote as follows:

"Major Hilton's style and manner of presenting his subject is of no ordinary character, and so far above the average of that to which the public has of late been accustomed, that the most skeptical cannot escape conviction, though they may not show it by action. Undeniable Gospel truth, startling facts, and keen thrusts at all the popular vices of the day, are interwoven with onslaughts upon the iniquities of the liquor traffic. The closing illustration last night caused many in the audience to rise irrationally to their feet, being as it were, made participants in the thrilling scene so graphically presented. This Evangelist undoubtedly ranks among the logically strong and powerfully practical public educators of the day."

Wanted Small Change.
A well-dressed overland passenger, who arrived from the east on this morning's express, jumped off the train as soon as it came to a halt, and hurriedly crossed the street to H. Davis' cigar store with a five-cent piece between his fingers, and asked to have it changed into pennies, saying that he frequently had use for small change. It is not strange that such people have money to travel on.

Taken Unawares.
Unexpected causes for malaria exist everywhere. Asksen took partly laid with water in the vicinity of your abode, a new location upon land situated in, but formerly overgrown or marshy, and causes for more occupation these produce the atmospheric miasmas which constitute the germs that, if inhaled ripen into fever and ague and congenial malaria, a person taken unawares with a malarial complaint should, as soon as it declares itself seek aid from the safe, non-disappointing, cordial medicine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has for over a third of a century, and in every quarter of the globe, relieved the malarial stricken, and neutralized miasma in air and water. The Bitters imparts activity of the stomach, bowels and liver, repels incipient rheumatism, and remedies inaction of the kidneys and bladder. Appetite and sleep are improved, and the invigoration of age is regained by its use.

By Associated Press.
LYNCHBURG, Va., Oct. 30.—A passenger train bound east and a freight train going west, on the Norfolk and Western railroad, collided last night between Liberty and Thaxton's. Both trains were wrecked, and it is reported that the firemen and engineers of both trains were killed; one passenger killed, and many hurt.

GOSHEN, Oct. 30.—The limited vestibule train, west-bound, on the Lake Shore road, was wrecked at Wawaka this morning. The entire train was thrown on its side. The wrecking train with railroad officers and physicians have gone to the scene. Various reports are rife as to the loss of life and injuries to passengers.

The accident was caused by the breaking of a side-bar of the engine. Three cars and the engine were dinged and one passenger slightly hurt.

Tanner's Successor.

Referring to the recent appointment of General Raum as Pension Commissioner, the Chicago Inter-Ocean says: General Raum was one of the most intimate and devoted of General Logan's friends, and it is no exaggeration to say that his appointment was a marked tribute of respect to the memory of the soldier statesman whose name is enshrined in every loyal American heart. President Harrison could hardly have made an appointment more satisfactory to the Republicans of Illinois. Time has not weakened the love of our people for General Logan, but, on the contrary, it has tended to deepen and quicken the appreciation of the loss sustained in his death. The selection was due to no pressure. Neither General Raum nor any of his friends have been pushing him. Nothing has been heard of any bulky petition in his favor or any importunity by visiting statesmen. The President knew the gentleman and all the bearings in his case. He did not need the assurance of Senators or Congressmen as to his competency or the favor with which his appointment would be received by the people. Illinois not only, but the veterans of the whole country, will rejoice in the wisdom and bottom significance of this appointment.

The Inter-Ocean also published the letter of Secretary Noble to Commissioner Tanner, written some three months ago, from which it may be easily seen how inevitable it was that the latter should be relieved. No self-respecting Secretary of the Interior would consent to have at the head of one of the bureaus of his department a Commissioner who thought himself independent of his superior officer. No doubt Mr. Tanner was honest in his purpose, but he was laboring under a misapprehension as to his own prerogatives, and one too serious to be overlooked. It was an aggravated case of big-head. That tells the whole story. General Raum is not likely to be thrown off his equilibrium.

WARNER MILLER, the defeated Republican candidate for Governor of New York, has disappointed his political opponents by a cheerful speech in support of the Republican State ticket. Mr. Miller had the mortification of being defeated on a ticket which was successful in his State on national issues, and, of course, attributed the result to local intrigue. On broad issues the Republican State ticket would have run even with the national ticket, and have won or lost with it. But it is well known that Republicans voted for Mr. Hill, not because they wanted to elect a Democratic Governor, but because Mr. Hill's position on the saloon question was in greater harmony with their personal interests. But defeat is defeat, says the San Francisco Call, and Mr. Miller had to stand the consequences. Had he been elected he would have had a potential voice in the distribution of offices; but, being defeated, he has little or nothing at his disposal. His political rival, Thomas C. Platt, got the ear of the Administration, and has placed himself at the crank of the machine. Democrats said Warner Miller would not stand the treatment he has received, but his speech shows that he considers the issues of the day of more importance than his personal advancement. His speech consolidates the Republican ranks in New York.

UNDER the heading of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," Mark Twain writes in November's Century as follows: "There wasn't even a bell or a speaking-tube in the castle. I had a great many servants, and those that were on duty lolled in the ante-rooms; and when I wanted one of them I had to go and call for him. There was no gas, there were no candles; a bronze dish half full of boarding-house butter with a blazing rag floating in it was the thing that produced what was regarded as light. A lot of these hung along the walls and modified the dark—just toned it down enough to make it dismal. If you went out at night, your servants carried torches. There were no books, pens, paper or ink, and no glass in the openings they believed to be windows. It is a little thing, glass is, until it is absent; then it becomes a big thing. But perhaps the worst of all was, that there wasn't any sugar, coffee, tea or tobacco. I saw that I was just another Robinson Crusoe cast away on an uninhabited island, with no society but some more or less tame animals, and if I wanted to make life bearable I must do as he did, invent, contrive, create; recognize things, set brain and hand to work, and keep them busy. Well, that was in my line."

CIGARETTE smoking is strictly prohibited at West Point. A cadet who violates the law is obliged to pace back and forth, rain or shine, for twelve hours, with a musket on his shoulder. Uncle Sam wants only vigorous, sound-bodied boys in his service.

TITLE VS. CASH.

The Lily to Drop Freddy for an English Title.
A recent New York dispatch reads as follows: A rumor to the effect that Mrs. Langtry and Freddy Gebhard have quarreled has been freely circulated around for several days past, and circumstances have been brought forward to support the theory of a serious disagreement. About a week ago Mr. Gebhard received a long missive from England, written by Mrs. Langtry and its contents were evidently displeasing to Mr. Gebhard. He made his appearance at Delmonico's that evening in a somewhat excited condition and surprised the waiters by the unusually liberal manner in which he ordered champagne. A member of the Union Club, who is close to Mr. Gebhard, in commenting upon the latter's actions since the receipt of the fateful letter, said last night: "It knocked the poor boy completely out." Another clubman said that it was freely rumored that Mrs. Langtry is at present receiving the attention of a well-known English nobleman with a title as long as Mr. Gebhard's purse.

Rev. Tewksburg Explains.
Rev. George S. Tewksburg, who has been called to Seattle, has made an explanation of the letter sent to that city from Cambridge, Mass., which was filled with innuendoes and was anonymously written. The reverend gentleman says the "fearful scene" mentioned in the letter arose from the fact that he was pleased to marry the lady of his choice.

Body Found.
The body of Young Singleton, the Los Angeles lawyer, who died in the desert a short while ago, having been left by his two companions, was found. The poor fellow was within eight miles of water, and evidently died in great agony. The body was completely mummified by the heat.

Asks For Proof of Citizenship.
The Governor of Sonora, Mexico, insists upon proof that the three men arrested on his territory and charged with the murder of Barney Martin, his wife and three children, are American citizens before he will return them to the American authorities.

Our Western Boundary.
Mr. Grunsky of the corps of engineers surveying the eastern boundary of the State of California has just returned to Sacramento from the final survey, and he states that California gains 4,170 feet in width, or nearly three-quarters of a mile.

Arrested for Perjury.
D. G. Brunger, the pursuer on the steamer Cyclone, has been arrested at Portlan for perjury. It is charged that he testified falsely during a recent examination into the collision which occurred between the steamers Alar and Cyclone.

Sold to the English.
An English syndicate has bought for $2,000,000 the immense hacienda of Zecajuxtila, near Cuatela, Mexico, with an accompanying silver mine.

Spring Disorders

Shattered nerves, tired brain, impure blood, debilitated system, all are the natural outcome in the Spring. A medicine must be used, and nothing equal Paine's Celery Compound. We let others praise us—you can't help believing a disinterested party.

Brigadier-General W. L. Greenleaf, Burlington, Vt., writes: "I have used Paine's Celery Compound on several occasions and always with benefit. Last spring, being very much run down and debilitated, I commenced taking it. Two bottles made me feel like a new man. As a general tonic and spring medicine I do not know of its equal."

"I have used two bottles of your Paine's Celery Compound, and it has given entire satisfaction as an appetizer and blood purifier." T. L. BAKER, Watertown, Dakota.

Paine's Celery Compound

Is prescribed by physicians, recommended by druggists, endorsed by ministers, praised by users, and guaranteed by the manufacturers, as a spring medicine which will do all that is claimed for it. Use it this spring, and see how quickly it tones you up.

Purifies the Blood.

Full accounts of wonderful cures made by Paine's Celery Compound after other medicines and the best physicians had failed, sent free. There's nothing like it.
SIX FOR $5.00. Druggists.

JOTTINGS.

Get some of the sweet cider kept by Leadbetter; vegetables of all kinds on hand.

By boarding at the Riverside Hotel, you will never have any use for a physician or a druggist.

Buy your paints, oils and brushes of C. J. Beck's, who is agent for the celebrated Chickering pianos.

J. J. Becker's Chicago Saloon is the place to go for a glass of either beer or Sacramento beer and a nice hot lunch.

For the best shave, shampoo or bath you ever had in the town, drop in at John Belz's Commercial Row barber shop.

Pens, pencils, drawing tools, school slates and both pen and pencil tablets of all sizes at C. A. Thurston's news depot.

S. L. Cohoon's agency for John Wieland's bottled beer is the place to go for a nice quiet retreat and your noon lunch.

For a nice quiet resort where you can find a good fire and the daily papers, drop in at George Becker's Granite Saloon.

For all kinds of the best family groceries, patronize J. N. Wallace who never fails to have exactly what you want and his prices are as low as anybody's.

Its Excellent Qualities.

Command to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye, and to the taste and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, hereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle was miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus wrote W. C. Harnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. "Get a free trial bottle at J. Hodgkinson's Drug Store."

The Best There Is.

A new typewriter has been invented by the party who invented half of the Remington and all of the Caligraph. It has no ribbon, no wooden bars, but is all steel, prints true and without any blur. It costs an even hundred dollars, and is worth two of any other machine. It prints better, wears longer, is easier to learn and works faster, besides other recommendations. C. A. Bragg, Agent.

There is but little, if any danger from whooping cough, when the cough is kept loose and expectoration easy, which can always be done by the free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger in giving it to children as it contains no injurious substance. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 20 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 25 years' experience is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, or Blood. Only a half a dollar a bottle, at S. J. Hodgkinson's druggist.

Buckley's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Hodgkinson & Co., druggists.

J. Westlake.

Has established himself in the boot and shoe shop formerly occupied by Wm. Hart, opposite Postoffice, where he is prepared to do all kinds of stylish work at the lowest prices. Ladies' fine shoes a specialty. Repairing neatly and promptly done. 03

Excellent, reliable and economical are the stoves and ranges sold by Lange & Schmitt; every house and store should have them. Call and inspect before purchasing.

DIPHTHERIA AND CROUP.

A Remedy Which is Said to be Never Failing.

As diphtheria is prevalent in this part of the State, and children everywhere are liable to be attacked with croup at this season, or, in fact, any season of the year, in the absence of a physician, the following from the Springfield Republican may be useful: "W. R. White of Chester sends the following the value of which he has tested: In a report to the French Academy of Medicine, Dr. Diethol stated that the vapor of liquid tar and turpentine would dissolve the fibrinous tissues which choke up the throat in croup and diphtheria. He described the process of treatment as follows: Take a teaspoon each of turpentine and liquid tar, put them into a pan or cup, and set fire to the mixture, taking care to have a large pan under it as a safeguard against the spread of the flames. A dense, resinous smoke arises, making the room dark. The patient immediately seems to experience relief; the choking and rattle stop; the patient falls into a slumber, and seems to inhale the smoke with pleasure. The fibrinous membrane soon becomes detached, and the patient coughs up microbes, which, when caught in a glass, may be seen to turn into smoke. In the course of three days the patient entirely recovers. This remedy has proved successful in many instances, and householders everywhere should bear it in mind. A prominent gentleman in Charleston, who applied the treatment to his child, after the sufferer was given over as incurable by his family physician, suggests that before burning the ingredients named, all such articles as would be likely to be injured by the thick smoke should be removed or covered up closely."

"IN SPITE OF ALL."

To Be Presented at McKissick's Opera House.

The New York Herald says: Miss Madden is probably the most interesting young actress now on the American stage. She has keen intelligence, a style, so far as it has been formulated, wholly her own, unlike that of any other player, and entirely free from conventionality, and a most charming personality which attracts the sympathy and admiration of all classes of theatre-goers. Her success in the shallow plays she has devoted her time to in the part has not been due to managerial sagacity and claptrap, as in the case of so many other young women who figure in the rural districts as stars; her original talent was recognized from the first. Last night she was seen to better advantage than ever before, even in "Caprice," and we are confident that Lyceum audiences will bestow cordial approval for many nights to come upon her portrayal of the heroine of "In Spite of All."

PERSONAL.

D. A. Bender came over from Carson last evening.

James Sloan, the Humboldt stockman, was in town this morning.

The Tribune reports S. Summerfield, the Carson attorney, seriously ill.

Captain J. W. E. Townsend, the navigator, historian, journalist, and mining expert, who is on his way to London, arrived in Reno last evening.

Alfred Helm, who, with the late Abraham Curry, Frank Proctor, J. J. Musser and other old-time Downieville men, gave Carson City its first boom, was in town last night.

San Francisco Meat Market.

Receipts continue to be ample for all market requirements, and the prospect is quite favorable for liberal supplies for a long time to come. Following are the rates for whole carcasses from slaughterers to dealers: BEEF—First quality, 60¢; second quality, 55¢; third quality, 50¢. PORK—Quotable at 50¢ for large and 45¢ for small. MUTTON—Quotable at 60¢. LAMB—Quotable at 60¢. HOGS—Live hogs, on foot, grain fed, medium, 45¢; heavy, 40¢; soft, 40¢; dressed hogs, 75¢. BIRDS—Quotable at 10¢.

The Pioneers.

At a meeting of the Pacific Coast Pioneers in Virginia City on Sunday night, H. H. Fine of Carson and Frank B. Doten of Bodie were elected life members of the society. On motion it was unanimously resolved to celebrate the coming anniversary of the admission of Nevada into the Union after the usual style of the society, by a banquet to be held at the Capitol Rosterie, Virginia City, to-morrow evening, October 31st.

A New Departure.

The Washington Press hears that Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Wainmaker "have formed a combination to effect something of a change in social customs next winter. Conversations, readings of popular authors and literary discussions will, it is said, to a certain extent take the place of luncheons, dinners and balls."

A Needed Movement.

The recent session of the American Forestry Congress in Philadelphia has attracted much attention. There is a growing sentiment in favor of reform in the management of our public timber lands and of a cessation of reckless waste of forest material everywhere.

Lost Their Neckings.

About a dozen apple and pear trees are reported to be in bloom at Lisbon, Conn., and a lilac bush is said to have so far forgot itself as to produce blossoms as fragrant as those of May.

Increasing Business.

An advance statement from the Auditor of the Pennsylvania Railroad shows that the total mileage in September was 11 per cent. more than in the corresponding month last year.

Oppressed Laborers.

The Missouri State Labor Commissioner reports that some of the coal mine operators in that State are in the habit of oppressing their employees most grievously.

WILLING TO STAND IN.

How Hon. W. S. Scott Gave Himself Away.

Congressman Scott of Pennsylvania, who has been posing as an enemy of corporations, two or three years ago wrote Chauncey M. Depew as follows: "My Dear Mr. Depew: I don't often ask for favors in the way of passes, but if I could get an annual pass, good until January, over the New York Central Railroad—and it would suit me better if I could have it from New York to Erie—in favor of Harry Butterfield, it would be of great advantage to me in my fight here in this district, and although you are a Republican and I a Democrat, we do not differ much in regard to our views in connection with corporate property, and I may be able to serve these 150,000 people should I pull through again. I am sure the pass would not be used three times between now and January 1st. Yours truly, W. S. Scott."

The pass was granted.

Becoming Educated on the Chinese Question.

The Washington Star of October 5th serves California a good turn in the following editorial paragraph: "New York is beginning to have a taste of what San Francisco and Portland and other Pacific Coast cities have passed through within the last twenty years in the upbuilding of a Chinese quarter, where these people of a strange civilization, using a language unintelligible to the eye and ear of our race, herd together and defy Caucasian rule and influence. Having once planted themselves in a place in this way it is almost impossible to root them out. They remodel a neighborhood in their own fashion. White people will not live among them, so that property values and rentals thereabout are wholly at the mercy of the Chinese themselves; and when means have been discovered of forcing them to move, the whites will not inhabit the same dwellings after them."

A SERIOUS BLUNDER.

A Lady Nearly Prostrated by a Patent Medicine.

A lady well-known in the Western Addition has been a great sufferer for years with indigestion and dyspepsia. Struck with the testimonials praising Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, she sent for a bottle. The druggist, not having it, talked them into taking another sarsaparilla. As the leading sarsaparilla use mineral blood purifiers, the effect of the emptying of lode of potash into a stomach already distressingly delicate was disastrous, almost prostrating her before the mistake was rectified. She then called upon Mrs. Fowler, of 227 Ellis street, whose name was among those cured by Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Fowler said it was true that it had cured her. Again reassured, the vegetable compound was sent for and gotten. The gentle action of its vegetable stimulus upon the liver, kidneys and digestive organs, and its warm tonic tones, were the very things needed, and she began improving and was her old self within a fortnight. This sounds like fiction, but the names can be given if necessary.—San Francisco Examiner.

Croup Can Be Prevented.

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. There is no question about this; as it has been done in thousands of cases, and you may depend upon it that when a child takes the croup, it is owing to the negligence of its parents. The croup never appears without due and timely warning; a few hours, or a day before the attack, the child becomes hoarse. This hoarseness is the first indication of croup, and is a sure sign that croup is to follow, unless promptly and properly treated. The free use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as directed with each bottle, under the heading "To prevent croup," will dispel all symptoms of the disease. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

THE BITER BITTEN.

One Case in Which the End Justified the Means.

There was death in the house; there was horror on every face; there was the tramp of men's feet striking a chill to the hearts of those who mourned. And the mourning was not the soft resignation of grief sent by Heaven alone, but the despairing agony of shame, horror and ruin.

For Charles Wurtz, who lay upon his bed, waiting the corner's coming, had died by his own hand, lifted in a passion of unbearable remorse. Only one short day before, just the twenty-four hours of time, there had been joyous hearts under the roof where now sorrow reigned, and it had seemed as if poverty and trouble had been sent apart from those now crushed under their weight.

In one of the lower rooms, a sort of home workshop with a bench, tools, books and drawings scattered about, Charles Wurtz, the son of the suicide, sat with his head upon his crossed arms, motionless. Right in the agony of a despair that would have wrung groans and tears from a weaker man. The room was cold, and already twilight shadows were gathering, but he had not stirred for hours, and seemed unconscious of the lapse of time. He was roused by a light touch upon his shoulder, and a voice, full of sympathy, saying:

"Charles, you have eaten nothing to-day. Come with me to Berta—poor little Berta." The young man lifted a face that, in spite of the wretchedness stamped upon it, was still a handsome one, and spoke, heavily:

"You here, Katie! Then you did not receive my letter?"

"I did. We will not talk of that now. Come."

Mechanically he obeyed the tender voice, the light touch of the little soft hand. She led him to a small, cozily-furnished dining-room, where a bright fire burned in the grate, a tea-table was spread, and a slight, fair-haired girl of sixteen, with a pale, aversal face, was trying, with all her girlish strength, to smile a welcome.

"Katie says you must eat, Karl," she said, tenderly, in German, the home language in the family, "and so I have had Gertrude get supper for us. There will be no one else here, Dr. Leider says."

"But, Katie! Charles persisted. And then the dark-eyed girl who had coaxed him into the room spoke.

"Karl!" she said, bravely, though a deep blush crept to her cheeks, "I should have expected one week later, I should have your wife."

His only answer was a gesture of despair.

"Think, then," she said, steadily, "that it is a week later."

"No, my own brave, true Katie," he said, hoarsely. "Yesterday I could think of you as the dear, cherished wife of a man on the high road to fortune. To-day?"

"I scarcely understand yet, Charles."

"You know, my own, that my father, after years of study, had perfected a patent that promised to make his fortune. It was still a weary time before he could command a sufficient sum to procure the machinery necessary to manufacture his article. But that, too, he conquered, and we had two silent partners, capitalists, who knew nothing of the process, but saw money in the invention. After all the years of struggle, our machinery was built, our patent upon the market, and now—this day—I have orders for nearly fifty thousand dollars' worth of work. Darling, it was not until the whole was an assured success that I asked you to be my wife."

"I know, dear."

"But what you did not know, coward that I was not to tell you, was that my father was a gambler. It was a passion with him. He could not resist the sight of a card. One of his friends—Herman Schorn, a friend—knowing this weakness, coaxed him yesterday to play; gave him drink, won money from him, and at last obtained his signature to a bill of sale of the machinery, the entire process of our invention. There was a mockery of purchase, the price was a thousand dollars, which we found in my father's pocket-book. When the fumes of drink were gone away from my poor father's brain, when he realized the ruin he had brought upon us all, he took his own life."

Herman Schorn, our competitor."

The girl's face became very pale, and a look of terror for a moment crept into her dark eyes. Then it was replaced by one of stern resolution, as if she mentally registered a vow she would keep till death.

The next weeks passed in a whirl of business perplexities. The gentlemen who had advanced money to buy the machinery demanded it back; the new proprietor flourished his bill of sale, and forbade the work to go forward until he was ready to direct it, and then Charles Wurtz had his revenge, and but an empty one.

Not one man in the factory understood the preparation of the material needed for the invention. This had been prepared by the father and son. Without it the entire factory was worthless. Through a sharp lawyer Charles Wurtz offered terms. The money advanced by the silent partners was to be paid in full, and he was to be taken into full partnership. The offer was promptly refused, and the false friend found himself the owner of expensive machinery he could not use, and a patent he could not sell.

It might have ended in some compromise, but Charles was offered a clerkship in another city, and Berta—a home in Germany with her mother's sister. So the old home was broken up, and Katie, brave and true, left to wait until fortune smiled again upon them.

On are; hard to understand, smiles and sneers when Herman Schorn was seen visiting at Katie's making friends with her widowed mother, sending gifts of flowers, fruits, books or music. It was well known in the little circle of society to which they belonged that Herman Schorn had been Katie's suitor since she was a mere school-girl.

Gossip saw the whole affair with its usual clear-sightedness. Katie had accepted Charles Wurtz when fortune seemed within his grasp, and had thrown him over when he was ruined. Herman Schorn was the wealthiest man, and even his recent purchases, and he begged himself close Katie's triumph when Katie, coyly, and with due maidenly reserve, let him see that his attentions were not un- welcome.

She was very pretty, with large brown eyes, and rich, dark hair, that contrasted with a pure, soft complexion and pearly white teeth. And she wore her most becoming dresses when Herman came to spend the evening; studied the songs he loved to sing with her; accompanied him to concerts, to drive, to walk, until Charles Wurtz might well have added to his sorrows that of desertion by his false lady-love.

Mrs. Hill, Katie's mother, looked on and wondered. After all her endeavors to make Katie see the advantage of accepting Herman Schorn, after the fearful scenes, in which Katie protested her devotion to Charles, without one word of explanation, Herman was taken into favor, and Charles was gone.

It was a year since Mr. Wurtz had been taken to his last resting-place, and Herman Schorn was bustling about in his own home, preparing a luncheon for visitors. The house, his own property, was situated on the outskirts of the city, where he transacted his business, and where Mrs. Hill's modest home lay. Often he had talked to both ladies of his plans, his garden, his paintings, and at last had invited them to drive out and lunch with him.

"I will make Katie give me my answer to-day," he said to himself, as he bustled about, driving the servants frantic by his hasty orders. "She has played fast and loose long enough. To-day she shall say yes or no!"

But Katie, as if divining his resolution, kept close to her mother until late in the afternoon, when Herman, having given Mrs. Hill an immense portfolio of pictures, resolutely drew Katie's hand through his arm and led her into a small room, half library, half business den. Before, however, she had been a moment in the room she took from a shelf a small article, which she examined with a child's curiosity.

"What is this?" she asked. "How pretty it is! What is it made of?"

"That is what I would give ten thousand dollars to know," was the answer, in a quick, savage tone. "That is Wurtz's confounded patent."

"Do you mean Charles Wurtz?" she asked, innocently. "Why, he was an old bear of mine. But I never knew he invented any thing."

"It was his father. And after he had sold me the right to manufacture and the machinery the old fool blew his brains out."

"Oh, how awful! Was that the reason Charles and Berta went away?"

"I suppose so."

"But, if you bought it all, why don't you make these?" I don't believe you did buy it," she said, in a coquetish, challenging tone.

"Don't you?" he said, opening a drawer in a large desk. "Read that."

"It is what Charles Wurtz would give his eyes to hold in his hands. It is the bill of sale his father gave me, and which I was fool enough to pay without learning the secret that made it of any value."

"But it is of value, is it not?"

"No. But if it did not exist Charles Wurtz could work his confounded patent without hindrance. And so I kept it. I'll have my revenge for the old fool's swindle!"

"I see! It was in this envelope, was it not? What a pity it is of so use. Would you get me a glass of water, Herman? I see you have a cooler in that corner."

But as she took the water she handed him the envelope, which he put carefully away in the locked drawer just as Mrs. Hill, mindful of the proprieties, entered the room.

"Just a year to-day since I came here," Charles Wurtz thought, as he entered the small room of a boarding-house that he called home, "and I am as far from Katie as ever. My patient, loving darling. But for her letters I think I should utterly despair. But while she is content to wait, surely I am man enough to work."

Then he espied a letter, a bulky document, under the blade of the gas he had just lighted. A folded paper dropped as he tore it open, and lay at his feet as he read.

"At last, at last, Charles! I send you the bill of sale that frees your invention. Don't blame me for the coquetry that was my way into Herman Schorn's house, where mother and I lunched to-day. And don't think I stole this. I have put into the envelope that held it two five-hundred-dollar notes, part of my little patrimony, dear, which you shall repay me some day. He has the paper he said he had, but has not been driven to suicide. I saw Mr. Pratt about a week ago, and he says every thing is as you left it, as both he and Mr. Wurtz insist that either you would tell your secret or Schorn's interest, and they get back the money they invested in the machinery. Burn it! Burn it! It is yours far more honestly than it ever was Herman Schorn's. And come home, Charles!"

"Your faithful, Katie."

Tear it! Burn it! After reading it, Charles Wurtz did both, and packed his trunk for home and Katie.

Herman Schorn blushed and swore when he passed the factory in full work, with Charles Wurtz directing the men. But when he hurried home to find the document that would shut the doors once more he found only the price he had paid, and said some words about woman's treachery that will not bear repetition.

But Katie Wurtz, the wife of the great manufacturer, who makes her happy as the day is long, can never be brought to admit any wrong in winning back what was fraudulently obtained, by strategy, when the full price of purchase was repaid.

"But I also sometimes say Berta, once more an inmate of her brother's home. I really would have to count to tell you how often Charles has paid me that thousand dollars."—Anna Shields, in N. Y. Ledger.

CARPENTER BEE'S NEST.

The Extraordinary Foresight Manifested in Its Construction.

We sometimes find in old oaken rails and the like, the nest of the carpenter bee—a curious receptacle, well known to many persons; but yet it merits attention, because it is a masterpiece of construction upon which much useful foresight has been manifested, it not being merely an asylum in which the young may be matured in quiet, but secured against external annoyance from its most destructive enemy by a contrivance so unusual and effective that it is formed from the result of a reasoning upon probabilities.

This creature—a short, stout, plain bee—becomes a tubular channel into some decayed woody substance, a post, pile, or such thing, boring in the direction of the fiber, making her repository at the bottom, being sufficiently deep for her purpose. She cuts a hole in the side of a post several large pieces, often a half, covers them to the bottom of her cave, and rolling them up so as to form a case; in this she deposits an egg. The mouth of the cave is then covered with five or six circular patches of leaves; fragments of wood like sawdust are then lodged over them, and the remainder of this chamber filled up with other patches of the leaf, requiring, perhaps, twenty or more to so accomplish it. This requires no great effort or time to effect, this active creature laboring with great assiduity; but the conveyance of the fragments which form the nest seems to be attended with much fatigue, for the bee has often been observed, with its burden drawn between its legs, to return to rest against the boll of a tree, or upon a wall, the abdomen contracting and dilating with a rapidity like the sides of a creature after exertion. Having acquired strength, her labors are resumed.

All these layers and sawdust are designed to secure the larva from punctures by the ichneumon fly, which is constantly seeking for caterpillars of various insects in which to deposit her egg; this hatches and grows with its growth, feeding on their vitals, consuming them, and perfecting itself. But all these guards effectually prevent the purpose of the fly, the larva remaining safe in its asylum until perfectly matured; it then penetrates through all these layers, assuming the form of the parent bee.

Knowing and Not Knowing: "Well, what do you know?" asked the lawyer of an unsatisfactory witness.

"There are some things I know and some things I don't know," said the witness.

"Then tell us some of them." "Well, I know a lawyer who's got a pocket-book full of money, but I don't know who he belongs to." "I move, your honor, that this witness be committed for contempt."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Figwort, Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrhs, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other Sarsaparillas or blood purifiers.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by Druggists; $1.50 for $5. Prepared only by H. H. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.
